Chapter 1 by Vignesh Vasudevan

The people were holding bows and arrows. Spears, daggers, and swords were in their hands as well. The whole village had weapons that could kill humans in a second. So how did the country of Panther have such a high population? No doubt these weapons could accidentally kill thousands of humans.

But they weren't humans.

They were a clan called the Sharpness. They had claws for nails, springs for feet, and blue elixirs for blood. They took on the clans that lived on the other side of the border every year. They had special powers to do with light. The battle always was a thrilling one, because whoever won got money and technology from the other kingdom to improve their own powers. Their goal was destroy all the other clans that lived in their continent. They had already defeated 3, which gave them 3 powers. They had scouts that looked out for the other armies and searched for only the greatest powers so that they spent their time usefully. Sharpness was going to be the best...or were they?
